

A. Describe Your Event

On the Movies page of my product website, users interact with a form to share their favorite movie titles. The main element is a textarea input field. When the user focuses on this field, a message appears with instructions on how to enter valid input (at least 3 characters, max 200). When the field loses focus, the script checks if the input is valid and displays an error message if it is not. When the form is submitted, the script prevents the default submission and displays a success message to the user. All feedback is shown directly below the input field for real-time guidance.
